Recruitment Feature of the Month:
Nuclear Safety and Security

The Department of Nuclear Safety and Security (NS) develops and implements the IAEA's nuclear safety and security programme. Nuclear safety addresses risks from normal operations and accidents, while nuclear security works to prevent and respond to deliberate attacks involving radioactive materials or nuclear facilities. The department's activities protect people and the environment from radiation exposure and support the needs of IAEA Member States in these areas.

All nuclear materials must be secured during use, storage, and transport, as they could cause significant harm if misused. The security challenge has expanded with the emergence of cyber-threats and new technologies that can either facilitate attacks or provide protection against them. This evolution has required the IAEA to broaden its security approach beyond traditional physical protection measures.

TRAINING NUCLEAR SECURITY EXPERTS

The IAEA Nuclear Security Training and Demonstration Centre (NSTDC) is the world's first international training centre dedicated to enhancing global nuclear security. Through practical, hands-on training in critical areas such as the physical protection of nuclear facilities, nuclear forensics, and cybersecurity, the Centre helps strengthen countries' abilities to tackle nuclear terrorism, address unique challenges and implement complex projects in the area of nuclear security.
